First Evening Edition.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, 2 O'CLOCK THE MURDER OF DR. BURDELL

The excitement relative to the murder of Dr. Burdell continues to increase, and this morning 200 or 300 people were assembled in front of the building. A strong police force was outside keeping the crowd back from the stoop and doorway." About noon to-day Mrs. Cunningham and her daughers were permitted to see the deceased, and for the last time on earth gaze upon his features, now calm in death. The agony of Mrs. Cunningham was intense, and her cries and lamentations were heard throughout the house. The daughters were also much distressed, and wept bitterly.

The lower part of the house was crowded with peo ple interested in the case, no one being permitted to go up stairs. The excitement among those indoors was very great.

In the course of the investigation this morning the Coroner made a furious onelaught on the city papers for the manner in which they had seen fit to speak of him and the course he had pursued. THE TESTIMONY.

The Coroner came at 9 o'clock. At 9:10 a. m., with three jurors present, the Coroner resumed the inquest. Coroner-I have but three jurors here, but I suppose that it will be legal. I have my own peculiar node of eliciting crime. I don't know why I should be brought to an account for it.

Coroner—Slow as you can.

Q. You know nothing in the world of the murder?
A. Nothing; when I took up the papers on Sunday merning I was shocked at it; I didn't suspect anything of the sort.

SKETCH OF DR. BURDELL'S LIFE.

From The Herald. From The Herald.

The late Dr. Harvey Bundell was born in Herkimer County, in or near Herkimer Village, New-York. He was born in 1811. His father died before he knew him. While he was yet a child, his mother mored from Herkimer County to Sackett's Harbor, Jefferson County, New-York. With her he resided till he was thirteen years old. His mother then turned him into the street, and ferbade him ever to return to the house. The boy, thus turned forth upon the world at an early the street, and ferbade him ever to return to the house. The boy, thus turned forth upon the world at so early an age, telt the throb of ambition, and was determined, according to his own words, to raise, to become great, to gain gold. Without a profession, education or means, he looked around him to see what course he should take—what path pursue—to achieve his desired success. The press held out the tempting bait. He determined to begin on the lowest round and mount the ladder, and consequently went to a neighboring country town and engaged himself as a compositor. He remained there for some years, and either did not like the business or had better induc ments held out to him in this city, for before he seventeenth year we find him in this city, for before his sevent-court year we find him here studying deutistry in his brother John soffice, which was then located on the corner of Chambers street and Broadway, where Stewart's stro now stands; he was of studious habits, and made good use street and Breadway, where Stewart's street and Streed, he was of studious habits, and made good use of his tire.

Ferming a taste for the medical profession, he went to Philadelphia when about 21 years old, and pursued a regular course of study in the Pennsylvania Medical College. He partially supported himself during his studies by the practice of dentistry, and was partially maintained by his brother, John Burdell of this city. Having graduated in the college at Philadelphia he returned to this city and entered his brother soffice, learning and practicing dentistry during the day, and practicing medicine at night. He expressed himself ready to do anything or practice any profession to make morey. John Burdell soon after marrying, Harvey lived in the house with him as a member of his family. Their dwelling house was in the same building, directly over the dental office. John Burdell owned two or three houses on the corner of Chambers street and Breadway at that time.

Harvey Burdell, after being in his brother's office a short time, opened an office for himse f in the house of his brother, and the next door to his office. They kept their offices there a number of years, doing a fair business, Harvey living all or most of the time with his brother. Harvey Burdell was a man of strong feelings and passions; he frequently quarreled with his brother, during which they had a severe fight, John alleging that Harvey was too intimate with his wife. On account of this quarrel, Harvey Burdell moved his office to the corner of Duane street and Broadway. Previous to this, there was a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. John Burdell, the latter applying to the proper authorities for a divorce.

Mrs. John Burdell, the latter applying to the proper authorities for a divorce.

Harvey took an active part in this quarrel in favor of Mrs. John Burdell, and against his brother. He used all his efforts to favor the divorce obtaining counsel for Mrs. Burdell, and, perhaps, supplying her with means. Mrs. Burdell succeeded in obtaining a partial divorce from her bushand, they were separated, all.

mony was given to her, but she was not permitted to marry again. While Harvey Burdell was parsuing this course ir relation to Mrs. John Burdell, he surceeded in getting his brother to make over all his prop ceeded in getting his brother to make over all his property to him by a mortgage, at the same time returning no equivalent for it, and representing to his brother John that property would be ease in Harvey's hards; that thereby Mrs. Burdell, who had a suit against him and another party who had an attachment against him would be prevented from getting his John's property. After remaining a few months at the corner of Duane street and Broadway, Harvey moved up to No. 362 Broadway, on the corner of Franklin street. John having been divorced from his wife made up with Harvey, and moved up and joined him in business at No. 362 Broadway.

Oct Breadway.

This arrangement is represented to have been made by Harvey for the purpose of getting John's trade at his office. However this may be, it is cer ain that they had not been long together before they quarreled; even before that, Harvey would not allow John to put his sign up upon the office in which they were both associated in doing business, so John put up his "shingle" on a carrisge shed which stood right by the side of the office. John Burdell then attempted to get from Harvey the mortgage of his (John's) property which he had made over to him for safe keeping, but Harvey refused to give it up, or to give any equivalent or re-

Is rever the mortage of his (John's) property which he had made over to him for safe keeping, but Harvey refused to give it up, or to give any equivalent or return for it. This occasioned another quarrel between them. Harvey succeeded in getting some of his things away from his brother John, and also receiving means from his brother Whilam, want up to Union place, at the corner of Fourteen's street and Union square, and opened an office there which he occupied, doing a good business, until his death in 1850.

During his last illness, and just before his death, Harvey Burdell got out an attachment sgainst him by means of the mortgages which he held, and with it and a Sheriff went to John's room and took possession of everything he had, even the fainiture of his death frequently tolo of this deed among his acquairmence. The night before John died, Harvey wrote a very peculiar will, which John signed. This will made Harvey the sole executor of his brothers estate, and specified that the property was to go to pay for debts. After his brother's death, Harvey wrote to Mrs. John Burdell, then at the South, informing her of her hus band's docease, and requesting her to easie to New-York. She did so but had naver received a coat of memery from the estate of her doceased husband. William Burdell, who is living in Cleveland, Ohio, held a mortgage of John's property, in consideration of the money advanced by the former to the latter, to enable the latter to opon an office in Union place, so when Wm. Burdell heard that Harvey had taken passession of John's property he commenced a sail against him. The two were in law about John's property till two years since. When Dr. Harvey Burdell had been seven years at No. 302 Breadway, he purchaved and moved into the house No. 31 Bond street, he located himself there in May, 1803. The testimony of the dentist who had connection with him, and persons who knew Harvey Burdell is that he was a merconary, self-sh man, with strong pessions, he was easily exitted but was not a man who would

Q. Now, Sir, will you describe easily and as louds as you can be the year of the reporter to hear you all the stransactions you performed for Mrs. Cunningham after side with all he relative, and held has anis with most fived in the house with Mrs. Burdell? A. Tookshy is most processed in business and failer in Brookyn; he wished to go to Colfornia, and I procured him a thick to go there he returned from Colfornia without making any of the considerable from Colfornia without making any of the considerable from Colfornia without making any of the was sick a long time; he afterward examinates the form of the was sick a long time; he afterward examinates being in the current of the first of your processes in that current of the colfornia without making any of the was upon the feith of a policy of instrument of the current of the first of your processes in the current of the first of your processes in the current of the first of your processes and the current of the first of your processes and the current of the first of your processes and the current of the first of your processes and the current of the first of your processes and the processes of the policy of a first of the processes of the first of your processes of the f the kirchen below the hall-door, so it any person rang the bell or entered the house at any time of night she would know it and attend them. Yet for all these services she barely received enough pay from the doctor for her subsistence. Dr. Bardell, as before mentioned, was a loose character, and consequently surrounded by such. He generally let his house to persons of balcharacter. Mrs. Tetten occupied his house in Broadway for some time, and be, as usual, had trouble with her and a law suit.

About three years ago Mr. Bulin, whose wife is half way for some time, and he, as usual, has treated with her said a law suit.

About three years ago Mr. Bulin, whose wife is half sister to Dr. Burdell, took the hunse No. 31 Bond street; they quarrieled, the parties moved from the house, and have never spoken to Burdell since.

A fittle over a years ago, Harvey Burdell employed his brother James to hald some houses for him in Herkiner County, N. Y., and agreed to give him a certain interest in them or remanerate him for building them, but a quarrel and live suit followed but seen them. Dr. Burdell also had a law suit with Benjamin F. Magnire, a relative, to whom he sold the office tools, Ne., of John Burdell at Union place.

F. Magnite, a relative, to whom he sold the office tools, Ac., of John Burdell at Union place.

There was a wealthy widow lady of this city who used to visit Dr. Burdell almost every day for two years. On occasion she called on him in the afternoon to go to the theater with him in the evening. On the way to the theater, she said she would like to something to eat, and entered Thompson's salcon and called for what she wanted. Dr. Burdell refused to call for at ything for binaself, saying that he had been to tea. She told him to call and be decent. He refveed—when she called for him. He would not eat; and on coming back for her wpald neither pay for himself nor her. The Doctor is represented by those intimately acquainted with him to have been a very pseuliar msu. He hatep children, and never had any pets in his eacept some Guinea pigs. His brother, Lewis Bardell, is now in the Lunatic Asylam, on Blackwell's Fland, having gone mad from the effects of a nameless habit. Not long since a paper was circulated among the densities of our city to get money to put the por fellow in the Asylam. Harvey would not give anything to put him in there.

The work entitled "Observations on the Structure," Physiology, Anatomy and Diseases of the Teeth," which he published in connection with his brother John in 1838, is represented to have been written by John. Another medical work, which deceased claimed to have Lans attd from the French, was translated by D. Sidies Doane.

Dr. Burdell was never connected with the American Society of Dental Surgeons. He was proposed two or three times as a candidate for membership of that Society but was never elected. This Society expelled a large number of members one year because they used amalgum—a compound of mercury and eliver—to fill the teeth with. The parties thus expelled and others afterward formed a society, called the New-York Society of Dental Surgeons—more popularly known as the Amalgum Society, breams they were in favor of neing that material to fill the treth with. Dr. Burdell was President of that Society at one time. It was uncertain the properties of the Society of the Socie ing to the proposal to break no the Society and divide the proceeds among the members. He was an honor ary member of the Philadelphia Medical Society, but was not a prominent party either in getting up or main taining the Dental Conventions held in Philadelphia and Naw-York. He did not attend the one in Philadelphia nor take a prominent part in the one in New-York. He was a member of the New-York Historical and Stailstical Society, and a Director in the Artisan's Eank of New York he was one of the New-York Historical and Stailstical Society, and a Director in the Artisan's Eank of New York he was one of the principal parties et gaged in getting up that Bank he took $25,000 worth of its stock, he had about $10,000 in it at the time of his death, and money in the Broadway Bank; he owned the house and lot No. 31 P ud street, worth $25,600; the house and lot No. 31 P ud street, worth $30,000; property in Shrewsbury, N. J., and real estate in Herkimer County, N. Y., and other property, so that he was worth at loss $100,000. There were five brothers in the Burdel family. Harvey and John, both dentains of this city, are deceased, there is one brother lying in Ohoi; another, who formerly lived in Mehigan, is now in It diana, the fifth, formerly of Valparaso, was not long since in this city, and is now in the Luna's Asylum on Brackwell's Island.

When Dr. Eurdel' bought the house No. 31 Bond streat he occupied the first flour and other roomy, the rectof the house was let; Mrs. Convingham then took it for a year, after which a Mr. Jones occupied it a few mentle when Mrs. Cunningham again took charge of it on the first of May last, and still complete.

MORE HIGHWAYMEN.

DARING ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY.

Notwithstanding the frequent warnings which the garroters and highwaymen generally have received of late, by some of their number being sent to the State Prison for life, they still continue, almost nightly, to take desperate chances in order to replenish their empty pockets, and if, in so doing, they sacrifice valu ble lives it is a matter of little consequence to them so long as they clude the Police.

Another outrageous case was perpetrated by these worthies on Mr. Selim Marks, a house-agent and collector who resides at No. 312 First avenue. On Tune day evening, while abroad on business, Mr. Marks observed three men following him, they keeping, however, at a respectful distance in the rear. He had no serious apprehension of violence at their hands; but it ems he was much mistaken.

While passing through an alley-way in Avenue -. near Sixteenth street, the ruffians followed close by hind Mr. Marks, and seining bim about the neck, attempted to stick a large plaster of shoemaker's wax and tar over his mouth to prevent his making a noise but, owing to a dexterous movement of the head, Mr. Marks received the villsinous compound on the side of his face. Surgeling with the highwaymen, Mr. Marks cried for help, which fortunately was heard by Officers Burden, Cassidy and Amoun, of the Eighteenth Ward Police, who promptly can up, and succeeded in arresting two of the villains, who gave their names as Thos.

Armetead and John Francis. Being confront d with Mr. Marks at the Sistion House he positively identified them as two of the persens who assaulted him and endcavored to step his menth to facilitate them in their refarious purpose. They were subsequently taken before Justice Flan-
